

Claims Reporting: DON'T DELAY

A delay in reporting claims can result in up to 40% higher costs.

Reporting Delays can cause:

Increased medical costs

Studies reveal that lags of 7 days or more can cause up to 40% higher claims costs.

Delays returning employees to work

Not reporting claims timely can hurt the ability to effectively manage medical treatment, delaying an employee's ability to return to work.

A higher probability of litigation

Delays of 14 days or more can increase the chances of litigation by 10-45%.

Educate supervisors and employees to ensure your claims are reported quickly.
